3 1 2

The 1960's gave us pocket transistor radios, psychedelic coloured mini skirts, bold furniture and semi-modern weatherboard homes. While all the other icons have disappeared, the houses have stood the test of time - and this one is a prime example.

Trim, taut and terrific, it has been well maintained, extended and updated over the years. It features three good-sized bedrooms, all with robes, modernised three-piece bathroom, gas-heated living room with polished timber floors adjoining tiled kitchen and dining area. U-shaped kitchen boasts gas cooker, dishwasher, good bench space and storage including appliance cupboard.

A rear extension incorporates a great family living room with cosy solid fuel heater opening to a covered outdoor living area.

Added features include wall-mounted air conditioner to the living room, ceiling fans, sliding door access to the front
